3. About Me Page

Content:

I am a dedicated student and leader driven by a deep curiosity for history and a commitment to community service. My journey has been defined by the pursuit of excellence, whether I am leading a service project as an Eagle Scout or analyzing the strategic shifts of past civilizations to better understand our modern world.

Growing up with a fishing rod in one hand and a history book in the other, I learned early on the value of patience and perspective. Serving as a Head Acolyte taught me reliability and precision, while my years on the varsity golf team sharpened my mental fortitude.

My passions are split between outdoor activities (fishing and golf) and historical preservation.

My academic and career goal is to work in a field that protects cultural heritage or uses historical knowledge to inform modern policy and strategy.

Guiding Motto: “Leave it better than you found it.”
